Swibel, Byrne: Broken elevators, faulty plumbing and a standoff over Federal funds

A Political Slop Bucket

There is a great deal of contro versey travelling throughout the City of Chicago regarding its Housing Authority as indicated in the following exerpt from the Times Magazine.

So much controversy that somebody is getting mad. Now, whats going on at home, here in Tacoma? Maybe we should be prompted to examine our own Housing Authority and its status.

In the later part of 1981, controversy arose during the elimination process of Hezekiah Gilven, former Deptuy Director of Tacoma Housing Authority and former Manager of Planning Development and Evaluation, Steve Hanson, as they and two other men feil victims of a "Budgetary Cut"

John Chen Beckwith, attorney for Gilven and Hanson, stated in a hearing that a 1981-1982 budget had been adopted by the board and approved by HUD for the entire fiscal year and there was no evidence of a possible fiscal crisis.

Lily Piva, THA Board member said the money was needed for other things, such as the maintenance of the park areas belonging to THA.

While the writer here is not implying any prejudice in the matter, what did happen to the money that they said they had enough of? How close is THA to the state that the CHA is in? What is true vs. Falacy?

With nearly 142,000 low-income tenants in 45,870 apartments, the Chicago Housing Authority is the second largest public-housing agency in the nation. It is also one of the worst, according to a study commissioned by the Federal Department of Housing and Urban Development. The CHA hasn't balanced its budget since 1977. Many of its tenants live in huge, crime-riddled, vermin-infested high rises, where broken elevators and faulty plumbing are facts of life. The problem isn't lack of money or manpower, the study concludes, but rather "conscious policies of the [CHA's] board chairman and senior staff." In effect, the study charges that the $100 million-a-year agency is a swamp of political patronage that only the ouster of its board and its chairman, Charles Swibel, can clean up.

Similar charges have been leveled against Swibel ever since he took over as CHA chairman in 1963. But the new HUD study has brought the matter to a head. HUD officials have frozen a $14.5 million CHA operating subsidy until Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne fires Swibel, but Byrne refuses to do it. Swibel is a key Byrne fund raiser, and critics say he has made the CHA an important cog in the city's Democratic machine. Byrne charges that HUD's demands are a "smoke screen" for what she claims are Reagan Administration efforts to destroy public housing. She also insists that only state authorities can fire Swibel. But Illinois Gov. James Thompson said last week, "If the city and the Federal government want to fight, it's their affair. I'm not going to get involved."

The current controversy started last May when the CHA, having already exhausted its $59.9 million annual Federal subsidy, requested a $49 million loan from HUD. HUD Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr. offered $16 million—but only if the CHA would submit to a management audit and agree to HUD-mandated reforms. The study, directed by New York urban planner Oscar Newman, found that the CHA routinely leaves tens of millions of dollars languishing in low-interest bank accounts and could save at least $25 million this year by, among other things, collecting maximum rents, improving outside contracting and halting the practice of paying skilled workers high wages for menial jobs. "It is almost as if the CHA exists for a purpose other than . . . good-quality public housing," the study concludes, ". . . rather, the acquisition of as many Federal government dollars as possible for the creation of patronage jobs and financial opportunities." Renault Robinson, a CHA board member, put it more bluntly: "The CHA is a political slop bucket, and everybody's drinking from it."

Battle: With pressure for Swibel's ouster mounting, Byrne recently appointed an oversight committee to monitor the CHA's operations. But four of the six committee members named so far are friends of Swibel, and most political observers believe that Byrne, who faces a tough battle for re-election next year, will be forced to go further. Both Chicago newspapers, as well as the city's top civic organizations, have called for Swibel's ouster, and other members of the CHA board have agreed to resign if Swibel does. HUD officials also hope the stalemate ends soon, because they realize that the impoundment of Federal funds mostly hurts the CHA's poor tenants. Early last week an 8-year-old boy playing in one of the agency's high rises leaned against a broken elevator door and fell thirteen floors to his death.

ENGINEERING WORKSHOP FOR MINORITY HIGH SCHOOL JUNIORS A SUCCESS!

The April 14 engineering workshop, Why Not Engineering?—An Orientation to Engineering As A Career, was jointly sponsored by the Pacific Lutheran University and The Marine Systems Operation Plant of Honeywell—Seattle.

The workshop which included a morning session at Honeywell—Shilshole and the afternoon at PLU provided 23 minority high school juniors from eight Pierce County schools with 1) A critical first hand look at engineering in the workplace; 2) a detailed orientation to a specific college engineering curriculum; 3) an opportunity to dialog with practicing engineers, engineering faculty and currently enrolled engineering students; and 4) tours of Honeywell and PLU. Continental breakfast and lunch was also provided.

Phillip W. Miner, Project Director and author of the successfully funded proposal for the workshop stated, "This joint effort is an attempt to encourage black and other minority youth to seriously pursue careers in engineering or other related Math/Science professions." Marry Barnes, a Honeywell Personnel Administrator and Coordinator of the Honeywell portion of the workshop, lauded the project as "An excellent investment in the future for Honeywell, the minority community, and the general society at large." "This has been the sharpest group of young people we've addressed," added Jim Galvin, Honeywell's Director of Engineering Sciences. During the closing session the student participants collectively expressed their thanks and positive reactions to the entire workshop.

The project proposal calls for key PLU engineering faculty/admissions office personnel to continue contact with the student participants. "We plan to monitor and assist the student's course selection during their senior year in high school," stated Dr. Roy Clark, PLU engineering faculty and a project presentor. "Admissions personnel will assit the youths with the mechanics of applying for admissions and financial aid to the colleges of their choice," he noted.

BANTU CARES

BANTU (Black Alliance Through Unity) of Pacific Lutheran University continues to support the black community of Tacoma/Pierce County.

In mid-March this black sutdent organization volunteered to conduct a phone follow-up campaign for the I CARE FUND. It meant calling all citizens who had pledged support of the Fund and reviewing their account status. The last contacts are scheduled to be completed by the end of this week.

The Fund was established by the Concerned Black Citizens (C. B. C.), a supporting committee of the Tacoma/Pierce County Black Collective. Through this fund citizens could donate money toward the purchase of food and volunteer personnel time at the Hilltop and Eastside Food Banks.

"The calling seems to have favorably served as a gentle reminder to the pledgers to continue their economic commitment to the Fund," says a Tacoma Urban League official who monitors the Fund receipts. "We've started to receive payments again on several pledges," he added. Several pledges were on schedule and/or paid in full.

"The follow-up assistance we are lending is a small way BANTU can say thank you to the black community for all they continue to do for us," says Theresa Lee-Hodson, follow-up plan to the Black Collective by the end of the month.

Other BANTU community involvements:

—They initiated a competition/challenge between the Offices of Minority Affairs and BSU's at all Pierce County colleges to help solicit new/renewal memberships in the 1982 NAACP membership drive for the Tacoma Branch (21 members secured to date!)

—Their members are working on the Political Strategies Committee of the Tacoma/Pierce County Black Collective

—They are planning an appreciation dessert for those businesses and individuals who have over the years assisted in sponsoring Black Awareness Month events

An Old Man's Musings

By James H. Patterson

Is there a Brother or Sister, so endowed with liberty, in this land of the free. Who can honestly say, he or she has no need for the N.A.A.C.P.? Can their living, be so easy and their lives so bland. That they see no reason to constantly watch the ominous movements of the Klan?

Can this Sister or Brother be so self-exalted and Big I prone to really believe that he or she got where they are solely on their own? Can they be so engrossed in their jobs and their intergrated rapport that they are unmindful of the struggling have not sisters and brothers or teenage junkies and yes, even Willie the Wine-O. as they fight to stay alive in the city's ghetto.

Can they be satisfied just to tell of their vacations in the Islands and the places they've been and not be concerned about the country's jails and prisons running over with our young kit and kin?

In their affluence they yell and scream about inflation and rising prices, (it's a free country) and no one can deny them that right but it is down right sinful when they simply ignore the Welfare Mother's plight.

They push their kids to become good enough to make a living by chasing or bouncing a ball but are oblivious of the fact that we have very few doctors and lawyers and almost no engineers at all.

They dream of the kid being a celebrity. Maybe an O.J. Al., or Jaba. Never realizing that the kid who digs in the books is more likely to be the star. Probably their thinking they should revamp. It has been said. "In the world of sports, there are ten thousand chumps for every champ."

Let us say to youth, its to you that the gauntlet must be picked up, your destiny is at stake and remember a special hairdo and fancy handshake does not a great people make.

The above is not necessarily the views of this paper or anyone else's but my own for that matter, but it's been said.

So thank goodness for the Black Media and Miss Jean Watley, The Facts Editor for being Democratic enough or shall I say condecending enough to print it.

"ALTERNATIVES" WOULD RAISE TAXES ON THE AVERAGE FAMILY

By Sen. Jeremiah Denton (R-AL)

The ghost of Herbert Hoover is alive and well, and proposing alternatives to President Reagan's budget.

Hoover, you may recall, cut taxes but then, when the economy did not improve immediately, he shifted into reverse. He followed the advice of the economists of his day and raised taxes in an attempt to balance the budget. That action helped push our fragile economy over the brink into the Great Depression.

Today, President Reagan is being urged to follow the same course as Hoover. Some of those who want him to balance the budget on the backs of working Americans are the same folks who advocated that policy more than 50 years ago. But ironically, many who denounced Hoover for decades now claim that Hooverism can cure our current economic ills.

LOCAL BLACK BUSINESS DIRECTORY

The Tacoma-Pierce County Black Collective is attempting to bring the black community closer to black businesses.

The Collective, a group with representation from the Urban League, NAACP, church, civic and fraternal organizations and government agencies, plans to begin its efforts by compiling a local black business directory. Currently, being produced, the directory will list all black businesses in the Tacoma-Pierce County area and be distributed throughout the black community.

The group's efforts began as the result of a conference sponsored by the Black students of Pacific Lutheran University entitled "Surviving the Economics of the 80's." Richard Hatcher, major of Gary Indiana, spoke at the conference and noted how more than $140 billion is spent by the nation's blacks annually and most leaves the community. He said that black people must find a way to "put a fence around that money so that it can be kept in the community and used to create jobs and stimulate new business."

Involved in the initial effort compiling the directory are individuals from a variety of occupations including business. Other business-oriented endeavors have been discussed by the Collective including a black economic conference, speakers bureau, collective advertising and others.

Anyone who wishes to become involved in the Collective's efforts can meet with the group Saturday mornings at 8 a. m. at the Colored Women's Club, 2316 So. Yakima or contact the FACTS for more information.

Senior Citizens Get Up

Mercie Smith an young 62 year old woman with lots of energy and go power. Has moved another level in her CPR field.

Mercie is very concerned about the plight for our senior citizens. She wants to encourage them to get up and go.

Mercie is 62 years old. At the age of 61, she set our for a new career. She finds it fulfilling and exciting because she is better abled, qualified and equipped to help someone in a time of crisis.

She has had to use her training quite often. But she didn't really want to talk about all the things she has been able to do, not in the sense of bragging. But she wanted to let older people as well as the young people know that just because you are a certain age, life does not stop. For the young people she mention an 11 year boy who had attended a class and is now able to help others.

"This training is very useful for unexpected situations", says Mercie. She says that when you don't know what you are doing, you can cause a person's death.

I always thought that when people were having epileptic seizure, you were supposed to put a spoon in their mouth to prevent that person from swallowing the tongue. But according to Mercie this is not so, She says there is no way you can swallow your tongue, but it is important for you to know what to do. Mercie feels good because she is in a real position to help others and considers it a blessing.

SO SENIOR CITIZENS
GET UP
and do something that will not only help others but yourself as well.

This little lady says her new found 2 year old career has successfully directed her mind to constructive things.

What's Happening to Male-Female Relationships?

Relationships between men and women are as old as man. The beginning can be traced back to Adam and Eve. But still, the relationship between men and women continues to be a struggle.

I have worked with both couples and singles from New York to Tacoma and the complaints are the same. "There are no good women left," complains the man; "There are no good men left," retorts the woman. Well, I ask myself, where have they all gone? If every one is saying "there are none left", then surely there must have been some "good" men or women at one time. Otherwise, all these people would not be using the word "left".

After many years of careful considerations, I've decided that all of the "good" men and women are in hiding. The question though, is where? Alas, I think I have finally discovered their hide-outs.

Some are hiding behind their own fear of getting involved; some are hiding behind years of learned traditions; some are hiding behind society's expectations of what male and female relationships are supposed to be, while others are hiding behind the excuse of "not being able to find the right person".

Early childhood stories television, movies, romantic magazines, etc., have played a significant role in shaping our perceptions of how these relationships "ought" to be. We are lead to believe that some "handsome and enchanting Knight" will one day suddenly appear, sweep us off our feet, to live happily ever after. Or that one day we will meet our "Sleeping Beauty" or "Cinderella" and live forever in total bliss. When we finally understand the reality of girl, boy relationships it is nothing like we have been lead to expect which creates total disillusionment.

Building a successful relationship requires more than relating it to a fantasy. It requires hours of hard work, honesty, sincerity, reality and being the "right" person too. The typical man or woman has been taught to believe that in order to be happy we must find the right person.

However, there is a breakdown in this logic. In order to find the right person, we must be the right person. There is an old adage that says, "We get back what we put into it." So we trod alone, day after day, looking for something that we ourselves are not willing to become, or even take the time to consider it.

In this series of articles I will look at what makes for a good relationship; what makes it go sour; and how to build a lasting and "right" one. Also, I will look at the dynamics found in relationships between the Black male and female.

The author, Archy Tillman is a Community Psychologist. He has over 7 years experience working with Black families, individuals and teenagers both doing therapy and community relations work. He has been active in community groups, educational groups, and understands the Black struggle from the personal experience of growing up in the south to working with street gangs in harlem.

WOMEN SPEAKS

By Valerie D. Gordon

You, A Victim of Rape
by Val Gordon

She laid still, naked and full of fear, waiting for the uninvited intruder to leave. The tall half-dressed man looks at her curled-up body. "If you tell anyone, I'll be back," he says, buttoning his shirt. The threat echoed off the unfeeling bedroom walls, as he made his way toward the door. Laughing, he hums the tune to "Another one bites the dust". The door slams shut. Reality hits. Suddenly, her small body begins to heave as uncontrollable tears rush from her face. "How could he, How dare he,... rape me?"

In one way, this fictitious account doesn't belong to anyone. Yet, in another, it belongs to at least one out of every four women who will be sexually assaulted in their lifetime.

"I'm not sure if more rapes are occurring, if women are beginning to report it more, or a combination of the two," says a former Pierce County Rape Relief volunteer. "But from my experience that "one out of four" figure is a low estimate."

Wishing to remain anonymous, the ex-volunteer says generally accepted myths surrounding rape helps perpetrate a "rape culture"--an environment that not only tolerates the violent crime but actually reinforces it.

"The meida sensationalizes rape," she says, "especially the motion picture industry". "And it's everywhere. Even album covers show macho men dominating women or women half-naked in seductive poses."

She continues, "But that's only part of the problem. People believe what's comfortable for them. For example, a lot of people believe that only young beautiful women are raped; that it occurs on dark lonely streets and that somehow women ask to be attacked by the way they dress."

Statistics prove these myths to be glaringly untrue. The age group of Rape Relief's youngest victim range from 3 months to the oldest of 93 years. This group includes both males and females, in addition to the handicapped and the mentally retarded being victims of sexual assault. Not only that, but 60% of all rapes in Pierce County occurred in the home and if you're over 21 there's a 60-75% chance you will be raped by someone you know, i.e. a relative, a neighbor, a date, etc.

"Rape is a crime of violence where someone overpowers another using sex as a weapon," she explains. "No one is exempt from being a victim of sexual assault. It can happen to anyone, even you."

Awareness of the possibility of becoming a victim is the first step in preventing an attack. To promote awareness, April 26th thru May 1st has been designated statewide, Rape Awareness Week.

"Being aware means knowing who you are, where you're going, how you're getting there and who is around you," the volunteer concludes. "It's also knowing you have options in case an assault occurs. The options include fighting back, fleeing, bazarre behavior, screaming or submitting. Each, along with any other act you may think of during an assault is valid. Anything a person does during an assault is the very best she/he can do."

FOR ANY TYPE OF HELP REGARDING SEXUAL ASSAULT, CONTACT PIERCE COUNTY RAPE RELIEF'S 24-HOUR CRISIS LINE: 474-RAPE.

Next week: a second article in a series will explore Racist concepts and myths of sexual assault.

Malcolm's Sports Report

A Tribute to a Coach

Coaching, have you tried it? Well if you haven't, you should. It is a job that most of the time there is no Praise or appreciation on the level of being paid or being a volunteer. Ben "Big Hands" Woods for an example coached TN Millers Pool Team. For the first half they were losers. He had to switch players several times, to get the right combination. A lot of times he wanted to give it up and quit, but with determination and believing in doing it right and trying to be fair to everyone becomes a problem sometimes. Some people think just because he is your friend he has special privileges. That is not so. The ones that come to practice and meetings "on time", are the ones that will play. One of his players wanted to quit because he was playing so bad. Big Hands talked to him and convinced him to stay with the team for the second half. Joe Wallace shot the best pool of his life and the team shared first place for a while, but finished a good second. This is their first year together, so next year should be an exciting one. Ben "Big Hands" keep the faith and keep on being your true self. One day they will learn to appreciate you.

Here are some helpful hints for you seniors to look out for when you are trying to pick a school to do your thing at. Watch and see if the coach is sincere. When he is talking to you, watch his eyes. If he can't look you straight into yours, "Beware". Look at your social life, are there places for you to go that you can relate with the people and have a good time? Example: music, food, clothes, girls, etc. Last but not least check the academic standard of the school. Go there to learn not to be a Jock. For you track people check for Indoor Facilities, where the weather gets cold.

I see that the Sonics are coming real close to the line up they are supposed to have. Seattle should beat Houston two games to one. Wilson keeps crushing their opponents on the cinder. They truely are the team to beat. TN Millers softball team lost their opener 15 - 2. It will get better fellas. Have any questions or answers drop me a line. Malcolm 1019 So. 12th St., Tacoma, 98405. This Week's Inspiration

Going and Coming

The Lord will keep your going out and your coming in from this time forth and for evermore.
Psalm 121:8

Some have called Psalm 121 "The Soldier's Psalm" because it speaks much of protection. Others refer to it as, "The Traveler's Psalm" since it mentions "going and coming."
"Going out and coming in" could fit many phases of life. It could refer to just anyone going out in the morning and coming in at eventide. It could mean the going out to work and the coming home at day's end. It could be birth, marking the official beginning of life, and death at the end. Spiritually, it could be our going forth as the children of God to serve Him in the world, and then coming into our eternal home.
Whether it is earthly or hevenly coming and going, the Lord has promised to bless and preserve it. Our hevenly Father has promised His guidance and presence with us in our earthly living. And Jesus said, "I am with you always."
Through Christ's redemption we "who once were far off have been brought near" to our Father. Now we can say to our God, "We are with You." Because Christ came to us and dwelt among us to save us, we can go to God in the Confidence that He loves us and hears our prayers.

We welcome news of your church and civic events.

COPING YOUR SUCCESSFUL WEIGHT CONTROL PROGRAM

By Dr. Charles W. Faulkner

1. MEDICAL CHECK-UP. A medical doctor is the best authority with whom you should confer before you begin your weight loss program. He will tell you if you have any serious physical limitations. Let your doctor determine the proper amount of weight for you to lose after he has checked the condition of your heart, liver, kidneys, lungs and circulatory system.
2. PHYSICIAN'S SUGGESTED DIETS. Your doctor may prescribe a diet best suited for you. It may be a simple "eat less" diet, an elimination or reduction of certain foods diet, a calorie or exchange coutn diet, or a specific, more demanding regimen. Your physician's instructions are to be followed.
3. PSYCHOLOGISTS SUGGESTIONS. Your psychologist will provide positive, helpful suggestions for you. They will reinforce the physician's instructions and provide a beneficial habit change that will enhance your weight reduction in a successful, and almost effortless manner.
4. GOAL SELECTION. Set a realistic weight loss goal. Your doctor will aid you. Ten pounds (more or less) per month may be all that is recommended. Develop a realistic attitude and a long-term commitment.
5. ELIMINATE BAD HABITS. Consciously recondition yourself. Stop those habits which can cause you to gain weight such as snacking between meals, or eating heavily at parties.
6. ALWAYS USE THIS RELAXATION EXERCISE PRIOR TO EATING. This exercise minimizes tension and stress, provides a calming effect and decreases excessive food desire. Perform this quick 30-second exercise before each meal: (A) Take a deep breath, fill the lungs completely with air, hold the breath while you count silently from one to five, then exhale very slowly and allow every muscle in your body to relax completely. (B) Repeat this exercise five consecutive times before beginning to eat. Remember, never eat while you are tense, nervous or under stress. This exercise will calm you and eliminate your compulsion.
7. DAILY WEIGHT RECORD. Keep a daily weight record. Be proud of your progress in reducing. You may experience peaks and even temporarily gain weight at times. This is not to be interpreted as a set-back—it is normal. Do not dwell on any weight gain, just think ahead to your weight reduction goal and continue to pursue it.
8. IMAGINE YOURSELF THIN. Picture yourself as a thinner person. This will in turn reduce the responses that trigger eating. Four times each day, visualize yourself as a slender, trim person.
9. SUPPORT OF FAMILY AND FRIENDS. Seek encouraging suggestions from friends and family when you are progressing. No negative comments should be made when you are maintaining the same weight or temporarily gaining weight. Keep your anxiety down. Family, friends and co-workers should be asked to make positive efforts to eliminate anxiety-causing and emotionally-negative situations. Do not be afraid to ask them for their support; you will be surprised at their interest in your welfare.
10. DETERMINE YOUR BEHAVIORAL PATTERNS. Report any patterns, situations or conditions which you think may have stimulted your appetite and excess food consumption. Analyze them yourself and discuss them with your physician and/or hypnotherapist.
